One Page Fix

[Product] by [Brand] · [store URL withheld]
Read on 7 November 2026 at phone size (375 × 812 px) · Prepared by Product Page Desk

The short version. This is a good product with real personality on the page. Fix one accuracy problem first: the ingredients list does not name smoked meat, and it names seafood without calling it out. Then bring the Add to Cart button up and add more photos. Everything below is ready to paste, apart from the confirm items only you can answer.

Fix these, in this order

#	What we saw on the page	Why it matters	The fix
P1	Ingredients don't match the product. The page lists "Rice Bran Oil, Chilli, Onion, Garlic, Dried Seafood, Salt". There is no smoked meat in that list, though smoked meat is in the name. Nothing calls out the seafood or says non-veg in the text.	A buyer who avoids that meat or shellfish, or has an allergy, reads this list to decide. An error here is a trust and safety problem, whatever it does to sales.	Check the list against your pack label and correct it. Add a clear "Contains" line (draft below). Ask your food-compliance adviser if the wording is sufficient; this note is not legal advice.
P1	Add to Cart sits about 1,300 px down on an 812 px phone screen. The whole description comes before it.	A phone shopper who has already decided has to scroll past more than a screenful to buy.	Move quantity and Add to Cart directly under the price, or switch on a sticky buy bar if your theme has one. Put the details below it (structure below).
P2	One product photo in the store's product data, showing the closed jar on fabric.	The product's whole promise is crunch and texture, and the page never shows them. Shoppers can't judge the size of a 200 g jar either.	Add the four shots in the photo brief below. You can take them on a phone.
P2	"Returns not accepted" is the only policy line, with nothing on a jar that arrives broken.	No returns is normal for food. The unanswered question is what happens if glass breaks in transit.	Keep the policy and add your damaged-in-transit promise (draft below, needs your confirmation).
P2	Two jars come to ₹1,370, which is ₹130 short of the ₹1,500 free-shipping line (one jar is ₹685).	The natural two-jar order misses the offer in your own banner. This is the cheapest way to raise order value that we can see from outside.	Test a two-jar pair that clears ₹1,500 with a small add-on, or show a "₹130 away from free shipping" message in the cart. The pricing call is yours.
P2	Delivery appears in two places with two answers: under 24 hours in the home metro (banner) and 3 to 5 working days (bullet). Cash on delivery isn't mentioned at all.	Both can be true, but the page doesn't say who gets which. Silence on COD sends the question to your DMs or to checkout.	One delivery block with both cases, plus a plain COD answer (draft below).

P3	Small things: "1 reviews" (grammar), "Rs." on the page but "₹" in the banner, the "FSSAI Approved" wording, a 79-character page title and no image alt text.	Each is minor, but together they make the page feel less finished.	Show your FSSAI licence number instead of "Approved" if you can. New title, description and alt text are below. Ask past buyers for reviews after delivery, and never write your own.

Your voice is kept on purpose: "hard-to-put-down" and "EVERYTHING!!!" stay because they're the best lines on the page. Highlighted items need your confirmation, since the page doesn't state them and we won't guess about food.

Shot	What to show	The question it answers
1. Spoon close-up	A spoonful lifted from an open jar, in daylight, with the crunchy bits in focus	What is it actually like?
2. On food	Spooned over eggs or momos, the two most familiar pairings on your list	How would I use it?
3. Size	The jar held in a hand, or beside a standard mug	How big is 200 g?
4. Back label	A readable shot of the ingredients and FSSAI panel	Can I trust it?

What you need to answer before publishing

✓	Question	Why we ask instead of guessing
☐	What is the exact ingredient list and order on the pack?	Food labelling must match the product
☐	Is the product non-vegetarian, and which allergens apply?	Safety
☐	Is it stored in the fridge or on the shelf after opening?	Not on the page
☐	What is your policy on damaged jars, and what's the claim window?	A promise only you can make
☐	Is COD available? What is your FSSAI licence number?	Not on the page

How to tell if it worked

In Shopify Analytics, note this product's sessions and add-to-cart rate for the 14 days before the change, then compare the 14 days after. Low-traffic pages will give noisy numbers, so judge them over a longer window.
